LOVE THAT LED TO MURDER TOLD BY MRS. BYWATERS

Bride Widowed by Crime of Brothers Bares Shame to Save Them.

PLEADED FOR MAN'S LIFE

Sitting in Invalid Chair, She Rehearses Childhood Courtship, Then Deceit.

CULPEPER, Va., Feb. 27 - The key Bywaters, the girl whose betrayal brought on the crime. Propped up in her too confident love, of her efforts to conceal the truth, of the dodging and twisting of the author of her ruin when he was asked to make the only reparation in his power, of her mariage to him and of what she remembered of the crime.

the tragedy. She swore that a short time after the marriage ceremony Bywaters was sitting by the side of her going to decert his bride and a conference was being held. Bywaters suddenly jumped up and dashed for the door, but the Strother boys headed him off. In his sudden rush he pulled her from the bed to the floor. Seeing that he could not escape by the door he turned to the window, and then began the shooting. She never looked on Bywaters's face the night of the tragedy, she way the pitiful condition of the girl who was so tragically made a widow was recognized.

Mrs. Bywaters testified that she was twenty-three years old, and that she had known Bywaters since she was a little child. At that time, she said, he treated her as a brother would. He became more affectionate after her father's death in 1991, and the winess in, reply to a question said that he relations wilf. Bywaters began shout flour months before her mother's death, in 1906.

"I loved him and he loved me," she said, "He told me he would then have a greater love for me, and I believed in him, loved him and had confidence in him, and felt that he would marry me as had promised to do."

At the request of Bywaters she made three visits to Washington, where two sperations were performed on her. Pheaded for His Life.

Mrs. Bywaters testified to going back home, where she met one of her brothers, but did not tell brim anything. He lates spoke to her about the matter, but did not tell brim anything. Daring the conversation her brother French said that he did not know that he wanted them to be married. The witness says that she again pleaded with her brothers, and it was her pleading that sayed Bywaters's life. Bywaters said that he would marry her, but even then he wanted it put off. He left about 5 clock that evening, the understanding being that the marriage should take place at a time designated by her includer. Statudely, when he came, be again asked for time, and she joined in his request.

"Why did you do that?" she was asked.
